Highlights of Ketchikan: City Tour, Potlatch Totem Park, Saxman Native Village and Rainforest Eagle Center

Ketchikan is nestled between the sea and the rainforest and is the native cultural center of Southeast Alaska. Native art and culture flourishes in Ketchikan due to the large population of native Alaskans and it also boasts the world's largest collection of totem poles.

Your visit begins at the infamous "Creek Street." Locals treasure this place and have preserved its architectural integrity and spirit, all the while creating a fascinating blend of shops, cafes, residences and wildlife-viewing opportunities.

At the Rainforest Sanctuary and Eagle Center, hear an introduction to the fascinating world of raptors, with an up-close show featuring the birds in the rehabilitation program. If conditions allow, you may have a picture taken with these majestic creatures.

Stroll down "Totem Row" at the Saxman Native Village and hear the stories behind some of the more famous poles carved by the Native ancestors. Explore a fully recreated Native Alaskan village at Potlatch Totem Park, built on the old fishing grounds of the Tlingit tribe. Take a walk up to the carving center where a totem pole carver will provide a demonstration.
